

Albert Vinzens

Let the children play.

How playing educates

Lasst die Kinder spielen.

Wie das Spiel den Menschen bildet

Edited by Albert Vinzens.

With contributions by Johannes Denger,
Peter Guttenhöfer, Werner Kuhfuss,
Manfred Schulze and Albert Vinzens.

254 p., Hardcover with book-jacket

ISBN 987-3-7725-2468-4

Rights sold to:

- Romania

More time for playing, please!

In all concern about promoting early childhood learning, the free play's fundamental importance for the child must not be overlooked. Playing crucially educates the boys and girls in their current and following development. <Let the children play> is a passionate plea for a vital freedom of human ability to exist and to learn.

Albert Vinzens grew up in Chur, Switzerland, studied philosophy in Zurich and received his doctorate from the University of Basel. At a young age he was an extreme climber, studied eurythmy for a while and was a jazz musician with Joe Haider in Munich. After a lectureship in anthropology at the University of Innsbruck, he was a lecturer at the Rudolf Steiner Institute in Kassel for over twenty years.

